

A lovely walk on Millpool firing range, Bodmin Moor took place on Wednesday 13th August.

The weather was kind by providing light cloud cover and a brisk wind. We walked across the firing range where butterflies and flowers were in abundance, ringlet, Meadow Brown and Small Heath butterflies, lousewort, crossleaved heath, chamomile and birdsfoot trefoil to name but a few of the flowers.

We had a break below Bellarmins Tor and a lovely picnic lunch by the old Glyn Valley Works Quarry.

Kes was grumpy and gave poor Dexter a bit of a hard time!

As the day went on the heat increased and we decided to skip going to Bury castle and keep it for another day.
